2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

- As for claims 9, 10, 18, 19: Miyake et al (hereinafter Miyake) teach a computer implemented system for visualizing, from topology data, a multi-layer topology schematic including of view levels, comprising the means/steps of:

visualization control means 312 (0088-0090, fig. 3), a component connection table 321 (0015, 0103, 0115) in which component-to-component connection included in the multi-layer topology schematics are defined as discrete component-to-component links independent of the view level to which each component belongs, partial domain management units prepared for each of a plurality of partial domains defined in the topology schematic, each of the partial domain management units includes predefined components to be displayed within the partial domain and a view level associated with each component, the component are defined for at least two of the view levels within the partial domain (0021, 0028, 0233-0235. See explanations of figures 79-115), wherein in response to an input by which a partial domain and a requested view level to which the currently displayed schematic is to change have been selected, the visualization control means set the requested view level in the partial domain management unit associated with the selected partial domain, and the system displays within the selected partial domain the component belonging to the requested view level as defined in the associated partial domain management unit (0021-0023), wherein the visualization control means displays connection lines between a component displayed in response to the input and a component that is currently display and had also been displayed before the input on the display screen in accordance with the component connection table (0234).

- As for claims 11, 12: Related components are displayed with line thickness visual style indicating the relationship (0114, 0118, figures 14, 79).
- As for claim 20: Responsive to an input identifying a selected partial domain and a requested view level, identifying component by referring to partial domain instance for the selected partial domain and displaying the symbol figure of the component in accordance with the definition of the view instance for the identified component (0105).
